The show is on the road

The scene is familiar. The sets are the same. The characters are, for the most part, familiar faces. The audience is the same. There is the feeling that prompts one to say to oneself, "Why, I've been here before and saw the same thing then."

And you could be right. For you see, the 1958 tobacco market opened here on Tuesday of this week. This was the thirty-first time that there has been a tobacco market opening here. Though the one here Tuesday was vastly different from that first opening back in 1928 when only 2,306,288 pounds of tobacco sold for a total of $248,246.07.

Some things remain the same as that first day in 1928 on our tobacco market. There is that same concern of the farmer about the price he might expect for his labor. There is that same feeling of carnival in the air with the sound of the auctioneer, the double row of buyers and checkers following along behind.

There are some of the same people here this year who sold tobacco here that first year. There is the same heat, the inevitable small boys selling boiled peanuts. There is still that tobacco smell. And there's the bevy of pretty girls standing around.

The big difference today is to be found in the production of the golden weed.

Back in 1928 it was a slow, backbreaking process. "Ole Jake," the mule pulling the plant to cultivate the land. The tedious job of hand-setting the plants. The heart breaking chore of bucket watering. Then the poisoning of the leaf with the cloth doper. The hand picking and stringing and hanging in the curing barn to be cured by heat from brick furnaces fired by oak.

And the average price in 1928 was $10.76 per hundred pounds.

And maybe there are some who still do it the way of 1928.

But progress has had its way with the farmer.

He plants his seeds, waters the tiny plants as they emerge from the soil with a sprinkler system. He treats them according to formulas for specific diseases, he pulls them and sets the plants in ground prepared by tractor. When they need watering he turns on his irrigation system. He dusts and sprays with tractor equipment. He picks it and strings it while seated in a high tobacco harvester with a canopy to protect him from the heat of the summer sun. He rides it to the barn in his harvester where it is hung in a concrete block barn and cured by controlled heat from oil or gas fired furnaces. He brings it to market in a two-ton truck which the family may use on Sunday to attend church.

And he's guaranteed a price by Uncle Sam. Not many sigh for the "good ole days."

Before the 1958 selling season is over Georgia and Florida will have sold more than eighty-four million pounds of the golden weed.

Acres are generally down in our section of the state. But the warehousemen, men who know tobacco best, agree that the 1958 when 10,156,882 pounds were sold here last year.

Rains in our county may cut down our volume some this year, though better prices are expected to offset any losses.

With the market now already three days old, Statesboro, Brooklet, Portal, Register, Silston, and all Bulloch County merchants are offering attractive stocks of merchandise to fill the needs and desires of the tobacco grower and his family. There is no need for him to take his family to Savannah, to Atlanta, Augusta, Macon—he can find it here and at a more reasonable price, figuring nothing on the cost of travel to and from our neighbor's stores. Your home town merchants welcome you.

The show is on the road. Only when the curtain is down on the 1958 production can we know if it has been a good one. We hope it will be so.

Regardless of the reviews, we commend the farmers of our county upon their courage, their willingness to work hard, never knowing when their labor will be nullified by Providence upon when he is completely dependent, but always conscious of the fact that His will be done, and accepting it in good spirit, remembering that 1959 is another year.

We commend them

We commend our City Council and our County Commissioners upon agreeing to share the cost of building a new armory here for our units of the National Guard. The funds they pledge are only a small part of the total cost, but it is necessary that they do so, if we are to stand a chance of the federal government and state government participating in the project with us.

And we commend the members of the Bulloch County Military Association for pledging the funds they have in hand which resulted from the final disposition of the armory property on East Vine Street.

We believe the men who are in our National Guard unit here deserved better than they now have. The equipment with which they work deserves better housing than now given. And we believe that our community deserves a better armory than it now has out on U. S. 301 at the airport area.

Great day for hot dogs

It was a great day for hot dogs. Hundreds of Statesboro and Bulloch County's small fry gathered at the Swim Center in Memorial Park on Wednesday afternoon of last week awaiting their term for a "go" at those Robbins Lanky Franks in the first annual Eat-A-Rama jointly sponsored by the Recreation Department and Robbins Packing Company.

It was a great contest, and we are looking forward to the 1959 Eat-A-Rama.

THE RAFLER LETTER was written to the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute offering loans to any of its members "interested in establishing textile plants in Indonesia" and stating I.C.A. was "prepared to insure such investments against political risks of expropriation, inconvertibility of currency and war damage." It additionally offered to finance the training of native workers for such factories and to install utilities not available at desirable plant sites.

The House Committee cited the Cambodia Port Highway project as an example of the "inefficient and inept" I.A.C. practices it condemned. It pointed out that the estimated cost of the undertaking has increased from $15 to $33 million since 1955 and noted that when work was begun "it was not even known with any precision just where the road was going."

It also disclosed that the contractor was permitted to make a $500,000 tax-free profit by selling himself $1 million of his own equipment—14 pieces of which had to be completely rebuilt before they could be used—through a Liberian corporation created solely for that purpose.

THE USE of foreign aid funds to subsidize textile plants abroad is a perfect illustration of the manner in which tax dollars paid by American taxpayers are being spent to finance the foreign competition which is destroying their domestic markets. It is another case of this nation attempting to do for people in other countries what it either is unable or unwilling to do for our own citizens here at home.

The committee report places the blame for the failure of the Cambodia Port Highway project on the "way our program is conducted." Thinking America will agree with its conjecture that "if the scope, cost and lack of economic justification for some of these projects were made known to the Congress before funds are appropriated, many of them might be disapproved and appropriations correspondingly reduced."

One of my father's favorite jokes was about the poor man who was starving to death. As he was about to draw his last breath a friend put the dying man in his wagon and started off to the cemetery. On the way a neighbor asked about his going. The friend explained that old man Jones was starving to death and he was on his way to bury him as soon as he died. The neighbor told the man to turn right around because he aimed to give the man a load of corn. Hearing this, old man Jones raised up enough to ask, "Is it shucked?" The neighbor said, "No." Old man Jones said, "Drive on!"

WE FELT pretty like we were about as trifling as the starving man when our friends not only raised this delicious food but gathered it and brought it to us. If one has ever had a garden, vegetables bought in a grocery store never taste as good as those things right out of the garden. Since we decided to turn our garden into an orchard we've never really enjoyed vegetables except those given us by friends. At least we had hoped this year to have something to give to friends but alas, there was only one peach. We watched it every day only to find it one day, still green, lying on the ground with one bite taken out. Some little one had discovered it too. The twelve blueberries must have been watched by the birds and they were the early ones. But there is another year.

SERIOUSLY, though, there is much to be grateful for in the way of wonderful foods this season. Surely the Lord has blessed our daily bread, and our blessings are greater even though undeserved.

Tougher to Build These Days

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

My reaction was: "Good gracious!"

Well that gives you an idea. But when we saw the meanness, the viciousness, the reclusiveness, lying there in that cardboard box, dead, it evoked strong feelings.

Ben Collins drove up in front of our office and invited us to come outside and see what he had.

We accepted his invitation.

What he had, he had a rattlesnake—dead—in that box in the trunk of his car. SIXTEEN RATTLES that dead snake had. And as big around as . . . oh, about ten inches or more we guessed, since no one wanted to put a tape measure around him, or her. Billy Tillman came along and professed knowledge on such things, volunteered the information that the snake might be a female, "cause it's a short one."

We stood there and looked at the dead thing. Ben said that his son, Benny, now eighteen years old, had shot the rattler with a shotgun. . . . there was evidence near the snake's head to confirm that. William McCarty, a Negro on Bill Bowen's farm, flushed the rattler and hit-tailed it to find somebody. He got Benny and they went back to the place where William saw the thing, and traced it into a den under some trash piled on some wire. They drug the wire from over the den with a tractor and let the snake have it.

Billy asked us if we wanted to know how death felt. Being a newspaperman, we allow as how we did. "Touch that thing there, and you'll get the feel of death." We did so, and Billy's right. Hand, scalp, giving under pressure. We withdrew our hand quickly with a feeling of revulsion overcoming us.

Mr. Collins told us that they had killed six rattlesnakes this summer in that section on his and Mr. Bowen's farms, west of Statesboro.

The others in our office came out and looked at the horrible sight. That was when we learned that M. L. Hall and Charlie Jackson had killed a rattler about as big this spring while on a fishing expedition. They made it sound easy. They walked up to within eight feet of the big rattler and just killed him. They explained that the snake had just gulped down a live rabbit and the rabbit was up to its coils, so he was just a helpless rattler full of rabbit.

We have been "spoken to" several times this year about our rattlesnake stories, most of which have come from our Stillson correspondent, Mrs. W. H. Morris.

One of our readers, whose principle activity is trying to attract new people to move to Statesboro to make their home, thinks our rattlesnake stories might discourage prospective citizens from considering our county as desirable sites for their homes.

Our contention that with as many rattlers as have been killed this year, Bulloch might be the safer place, making it more desirable.

Four Named To Fall GTC Faculty

Four additional faculty members for the 1958-59 school year have been announced by Dr. Zach S. Henderson, president of Georgia Teachers College.

The appointments include one each in fine arts, English, home economics and social science.

Dr. Lawrence Huff will be an associate professor of English. A native of Madison County, Georgia, he received A. B. and M. A. degrees from the University of Georgia, where he attained membership in Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Huff earned a Ph. D. at Vanderbilt University in June of this year. Since 1956 he has been an assistant professor of English at Georgia State College in Atlanta. He has also taught English and French at the University of Georgia.

Miss Lucille Goughly will be an assistant professor in clothing and textiles in the division of home economics. She is a native of Gadsden, Alabama.

Miss Goughly attended Alabama College at Monticello, and received a B. S. at Auburn and an M. S. at the University of Tennessee.

Her most recent teaching experience was as head of the home economics division and dean of girls at Pensacola (Fla.) high school. She has also taught in the public schools of Alabama and Mississippi.

William E. Parker will be an assistant professor of fine arts. A native of Jacksonville, Fla., he has been for the past two years an administrative specialist in the U. S. Army.

His B. A. and M. A. degrees were earned at the University of Florida. He has taught there and in Florida high schools also.

Dr. Samuel Tilden Habel will be an associate professor of social science. Widely experienced in research and study, he received a B. A. at the University of Richmond, Th. M. at Southern Baptist Seminary, and his Ph. D. at Scotland's University of Edinburgh.

His major fields are philosophy and social psychology. He is the author of many articles, as well as the book "Twelve Apostles" in 1956. Dr. and Mrs. Habel have a boy and a girl.

Dr. Sam P. Wiggins, G.T.C. graduate of 1940, is the author of a new book, "Successful High School Teaching," published this month by Houghton Mifflin Publishing Company.

Dr. Wiggins received his B.S. at G.T.C., his M. Ed. at Duke University, and Ph. D. at George Peabody College.

A frequent contributor to the Education Journal, Dr. Wiggins is the author of "The Student Teacher in Action" (1957).

Now associate professor of secondary education at George Peabody College, he has had wide experience in public school teaching, supervision, and administration. He has supervised student teaching at Emory University and Agnes Scott College.

Among freshmen, general dissatisfaction with the instruction and counseling program ranked highest among causes for withdrawal.

For sophomores, juniors, and seniors, personal problems ranked highest.

The holding power of college indicated by these figures represents a significant improvement over those shown by a study done in 1957.

Dr. Zach S. Henderson, president of G.T.C., was highly pleased with the exhibit. "I was amazed at the thoroughness of the exhibit, and fully appreciate the many hours of work that went into the project. I feel that the elementary science teaching in this area cannot fail to benefit from such an exhibit," he said.

The open house culminated the activity of the workshop, which resulted from a general desire for a better science program in the schools of Georgia. The State Department of Education granted scholarships to many of the participants in the workshop.

A total of 71 teachers from South Georgia schools attended the workshop. Instructors were Mr. Tully S. Pennington, associate professor of biology at G.T.C., and Miss Virginia Parker, science teacher at Jordan High School in Columbus. State consultant has been Mr. H. V. Bulloch of Atlanta.

A special hall exhibit at the open house specialized in space and the universe. In addition, special scientific exhibits in each of the four classrooms included nearly every other scientific area.

I feel that the elementary science teaching in this area cannot fail to benefit from such an exhibit," he said.

The open house culminated the activity of the workshop, which resulted from a general desire for a better science program in the schools of Georgia. The State Department of Education granted scholarships to many of the participants in the workshop.

A total of 71 teachers from South Georgia schools attended the workshop. Instructors were Mr. Tully S. Pennington, associate professor of biology at G.T.C., and Miss Virginia Parker, science teacher at Jordan High School in Columbus. State consultant has been Mr. H. V. Bulloch of Atlanta.

A special hall exhibit at the open house specialized in space and the universe. In addition, special scientific exhibits in each of the four classrooms included nearly every other scientific area.

Dr. Sam Wiggins, 1940 G.T.C. Grad. Publishes Book

Dr. Sam P. Wiggins, G.T.C. graduate of 1940, is the author of a new book, "Successful High School Teaching," published this month by Houghton Mifflin Publishing Company.

Dr. Wiggins received his B.S. at G.T.C., his M. Ed. at Duke University, and Ph. D. at George Peabody College.

A frequent contributor to the Education Journal, Dr. Wiggins is the author of "The Student Teacher in Action" (1957).

Now associate professor of secondary education at George Peabody College, he has had wide experience in public school teaching, supervision, and administration. He has supervised student teaching at Emory University and Agnes Scott College.

Among freshmen, general dissatisfaction with the instruction and counseling program ranked highest among causes for withdrawal.

For sophomores, juniors, and seniors, personal problems ranked highest.

The holding power of college indicated by these figures represents a significant improvement over those shown by a study done in 1957.

Dr. Zach S. Henderson, president of G.T.C., was highly pleased with the exhibit. "I was amazed at the thoroughness of the exhibit, and fully appreciate the many hours of work that went into the project. I feel that the elementary science teaching in this area cannot fail to benefit from such an exhibit," he said.

Political Statement

To My Friends and all voting citizens of Bulloch County:

I will appreciate your influence and support in the forthcoming primary of September 10 as one of your representatives from Bulloch County to the General Assembly of Georgia. During the time that you have honored me as your representative I assure you that I have given my time unselfishly to the study of each bill which was presented and voted on every bill, to the best of my ability, for the things most beneficial to Bulloch County, and to our state. On every occasion I voted according to my own convictions and according to the dictates of my conscience hoping and praying at all times that every vote cast by me would be beneficial to my constituents at home. Let me assure you that I will not support any measure to increase taxes without the consent of my constituents in Bulloch County.

I realize that there were times when some of our citizens did not agree with me on certain issues and bills, and I did appreciate discussing their views and problems in an effort to arrive at those things most beneficial to all of Bulloch County.

I appeal for your vote, influence and support in the primary to be held on September 10, and pledge you, if you return to me as your representative, to always cast my vote for those bills which by God's guidance will benefit you, the good people of Bulloch County.

I further promise to resist any pressure by any individual or groups of politicians. I feel that my experience, as your representative, should be beneficial to the good citizens of our great county.

During next January there are many bills coming before the General Assembly which I am somewhat familiar with and I again assure you of my best efforts in your behalf.

Thanking you for past favors, I solicit your continued support.

Sincerely yours, WILEY B. FORDHAM

ELABORATE TEA IN CLAXTON HONORING MISS LANIER

On Tuesday afternoon, Miss Madge Lanier of Brooklet was the central figure at a lovely tea given by Mrs. Joe Edwards Sr., mother of the groom-elect, at the Plantation Room in the Town and Country Restaurant at Claxton.

The guests were met by Mrs. N. A. Thaggard, who introduced them to the receiving line in which were Mrs. Edwards Sr., the mother of the groom, Miss Lanier and her mother, Mrs. James Lanier of Brooklet, and sister of the groom, Miss Peggy Edwards.

Miss Ann Edwards presided at the table where the guests registered. The table, overlaid with an imported linen and lace cloth, had at one side a circular arrangement of pink roses, gladioli, and asters, centered with a single silver candle stick holding a white burning taper. Mingling with the guests were Mrs. B. J. Calhoun of Baskley, Mrs. W. D. Sands, and Mrs. Tom Edwards Jr. of Claxton. The tea table was exceptionally lovely, overlaid with a white damask banquet cloth, was centered with a large arrangement of gladioli, asters, and roses in shades of pink, accented with white statice. The focal point of the decorations was a miniature bride doll with blonde hair, like that of the honoree, wearing a wedding gown with veil, bouquet and wedding slippers. Candelabra flanking the central arrangement held lighted pink candles. Up and down the length of the table, silver sandwich plates for the party sandwiches, trays of stuffed dates and compotes with bridal mints and nuts. At each end of the table were brilliant crystal punch bowls from which Misses Julia Adams and Linda Smith served punch. Others assisting in serving from the table were Sally Jones, Sally Edwards, Lynn Edwards and Norma Edwards. The rendering lovely music through the hours from 5 to 6:30 p. m. were Mrs. W. L. Adams and Mrs. Frank Smith. The lovely honoree wore pink silk organza fashioned with an off-shoulder neckline with tiny straps over the shoulders. The very full skirt ended with sculptured embroidered designs in deeper pink, accented the lovely music through the hours from 5 to 6:30 p. m. were Mrs. W. L. Adams

The other house was completed in the late spring of 1928. The land for these warehouses was furnished by the Georgia and Florida Investment Company having been purchased by that company from the M. M. Holland Estate. The cost of the two houses was about $40,000, and the difference in that amount and the amount of stock sold was paid out of the earnings in 1924 when a four per cent dividend was declared.

In 1937 there were approximately 150 stockholders in the Statesboro Tobacco Warehouse Company. In 1937 the officers were R. J. Kennedy, president, and Edwin Groover, secretary and treasurer. The directors were R. J. Kennedy, Edwin Groover, Alfred Dorman, S. W. Lewis and Grady K. Johnston.

Surprise is planned for C. of C. meeting

On Wednesday last week the Bulloch County Mental Health Association met at the health department with community personnel to complete plans for their fund drive which began on Monday of this week.

Attending the meeting were Mrs. Claude Smith, Mrs. Doris Cason, Mrs. Edwin Banks, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Womack, Mr. and Mrs. Wynn, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cox, Mrs. Archie NeSmith, Mrs. D. M. Thompson, Mr. Roy Kelly, and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Miller.

Others present included Miss Maude White, Dr. Helen Deal, Dr. Kathryn Lovett, Mr. Lowell Atkins, Mr. Carroll Herrington, Mr. Osborne Banks, Mr. Ike Minkovitz, Mr. Johnson Black, Mr. Bob Mikel, Mrs. Francis Groover, and Mrs. Aherns.

John Black, president of the organization, presented key facts on mental health. Dr. Helen Deal told how a program on mental health can be helpful. Others speaking were Miss White, Mr. Bob Mikel, and Mrs. Aherns.

It is something to get excited about! According to Kermit R. Carr, program chairman of the Statesboro and Bulloch County Chamber of Commerce, the next meeting of the chamber, Tuesday, August 6, has to do with prospecting for that gold if you are interested—as a citizen as well as a gold-hungry individual.

In 1937 Joe and Julia Tillman and Charlie Randolph built and opened a new warehouse on South College Street.

In 1946 Bob Sheppard and Aubert J. Brannen built a big new warehouse on South Zetterower Avenue and operated it in connection with their warehouse on South College Street.

In 1958 Mr. Brannen bought out the R. E. Sheppard Warehouse and interest in this warehouse and built a new warehouse on U. S. 301 at the Packing House Road.

In 1945 The New Statesboro Tobacco Warehouse opened on Hill Street.

In 1954 the Farmers Tobacco Warehouse opened on U. S. 301 north of Statesboro.
